

Advocating for Teachers

1 in 3 teachers in the U.S. are thinking of quitting the classroom¹

What Teachers Are Saying²

What Teachers Are Optimistic About?³

75% Educators who said that parent-school communication increased during the pandemic

What Districts Can Do to Be Better Advocates for Educators

Ensuring the right conditions for student success begins with supporting and retaining high-quality educators. Tools such as BoardDocs help staff, parents and community members stay positively engaged and better informed. Boards and district leaders nationwide use BoardDocs to highlight strategic priorities and policies: building transparency, trust and communication.

“During the COVID-19 pandemic it has been more relevant than ever to meet the governance needs of schools using technology. BoardDocs has allowed us to remain publicly transparent and accessible to all of our stakeholders through this process.”

Tricia Winters

Executive Assistant to the Superintendent, Cottonwood Oak Creek School District

